

Bio

Bryn Taylor — London-based digital product designer

I have a firm belief in considered, well-crafted and visually-striking design. I strive to provide users with simple, beautiful and intuitive solutions to a variety of complex problems and challenges.

I understand how vital an engaging user experience is — it is crucial to me that the user's needs are at the forefront of my design work. I am a forward-thinking and highly motivated individual with a razor-sharp eye for detail.

Over the years I have had the pleasure of working with some awesome brands and companies including Adidas, Microsoft, Mastercard and Vodafone.

I always like to keep myself busy — I'm driven by curiosity and have an insatiable thirst for learning. I love to experiment within the field of design — most recently exploring 3D software, iconography and a typeface design.

Experience

Monzo Product Designer

April 2019–Present

Working across multiple areas of the Monzo product. Including a customer reward program, a premium account offering, making credit scores accessible and a loans product. Working in cross-functional squads to ship high-quality and impactful work to 4 million+ Monzo customers.

Thrive Senior Product Designer

July 2017–April 2019

Thrive is an early stage health-tech startup providing blood tests that you can take at home. I joined as the first design hire and led all of Thrive's design output across digital and physical products. I worked on end-to-end solutions that solved real problems and aligned to our company vision.

Great Fridays Senior Visual Designer

November 2014–June 2017

Over my time at Great Fridays — I grew to become a senior member of the design team. I worked closely with strategists, developers, other designers and senior stakeholders to produce considered, purposeful and future-proof work for real people's needs. Working at Great Fridays spanned many different disciplines including user interface, user experience, responsive web, native mobile and service design — creating outputs such as clickable prototypes, mobile apps, style guides, user-journeys, and service maps.

Morrisons Digital Freelance Digital Designer

July 2014–October 2014

Working as part of the in-house digital team for Morrisons — the fourth largest supermarket in the UK. I designed assets for their homepage which were subsequently seen by millions, email campaigns sent out to hundreds of thousands and many interactive web modules and digital campaigns.

Firedog Design Junior Digital Designer

October 2013–June 2014

Firedog is a digital branding agency in Shoreditch, London. My role involved working closely with the digital director to produce user-friendly digital solutions for a range of clients. I worked on responsive web projects as well as branding, infographics, iconography, wireframing and concept creation.

Side projects

Citysets

July 2016–January 2017

A growing collection of open-source city-based icon sets. 120 icons covering six cities. Citysets have been featured on numerous design blogs and websites.

Sans-serif typeface

November 2015–Present

A dip into designing my own sans-serif typeface for digital use.

77 Essential Icons

October 2014–January 2015

A set of 77 outline icons available for free download — the set of icons has now racked up more than 25,000 downloads.
